Teaching

I am proud to report that our teaching evaluations consistently rank among the best in the university and many of our faculty members have received highly competitive teaching awards. You will also be taught by faculty members who are leaders in their field, widely published both nationally and internationally.

Global Perspectives

You will find a law school committed to providing its students with international opportunities that include our Global Law Programs at our Bader International Study Centre in the UK, student exchange opportunities ranging from Europe to Asia, and a wide variety of international visitors and students at the law school.

Students

Our students play a uniquely important role in the governance of the law school, actively participating in Faculty Board deliberations, hiring decisions, and implementing the strategic direction for our school.

I am passionate about the ability of a legal education to broaden horizons and enrich minds. At Queen's law school, we are committed to providing this opportunity to all our students. I encourage you to make the most of the rich assortment of opportunities that Queen's law has to offer, including our academic programs and legal clinics – our international programs – mooting opportunities – law journal – faculty and university governance opportunities.

Once again, congratulations and welcome to Queen's law. I look forward to participating in the orientation activities and to meeting all of you.

Yours sincerely,

Bill Flanagan
Dean
