Editorial Positions

Founding Managing Editor, Canadian Journal of Commercial Arbitration (2018-)

General Editor, Kluwer Arbitration Practical Content (2018-) KAPC is a new online service put out by Kluwer, the largest publisher of international arbitration materials, formally launching in 2019. It involves a series of practical guides to different aspects of international arbitration law. Each module is written by a junior academic or midlevel/senior associate-level practitioner. As the first of three General Editors to be engaged, I helped select the other two General Editors and the topics to be covered in the initial launch of modules, recruited two of the module authors, and consulted on matters like the layout and content of the KAPC website. Actual editing of draft modules began in 2019.

Co-Book Review Editor, American Journal of Comparative Law (2018- as acting editor, 2019- as full member of the editorial board)

I listed my role as Managing Editor of the Canadian Journal of Commercial Arbitration above. In addition to my ongoing editorial duties—which did not really start until 2019—I built this journal from scratch. Starting from July 2018, in collaboration with the three Executive Editors (one of whom I helped recruit) but mostly on my own, I:

Wrote the CJCA's mission statement, guidelines for authors, style guide, etc.

Wrote the terms of reference for the CJCA's Editorial Advisory Board and recruited most of its members

Recruited a University of Ottawa professor to serve as Case Comments and Developments Editor
Collaborated with the publisher, Juris, on all matters relating to subscriptions, copyright permissions, article formatting, etc.

Appeared on the Stare Indecisus podcast (UVic Law School) to discuss my research on regulatory competition in international arbitration (March 2018)
