WHY STUDY ABROAD AT

QUEEN'S LAW

One of Canada's Most Prestigious Universities

Queen's University is a vibrant community, boasting 175 years of tradition, academic excellence, research, and a beautiful waterfront campus made of limestone buildings and modern facilities. Queen's is one of Canada's oldest degree-granting institutions, and has influenced Canadian higher education since 1841 when it was established by Royal Charter of Queen Victoria.

Location

The Faculty of Law is located in the heart of the historic Queen's campus near the shores of Lake Ontario and a short walk from downtown Kingston. Most Queen's Law students live within a 15-minute walking distance to the law school. This allows them to spend more time forging friendships and making connections with professors, colleagues and the law community as a whole.

No matter where our students come from it doesn't take long to fall in love with Canada's first capital. A beautiful downtown, dynamic food scene, affordable cost of living, and proximity to the law school makes it a city that's easy on the eyes, great for the wallet, and full of both indoor and outdoor surprises. Kingston offers the perfect blend of a quaint small-town feel with big city amenities.

Access to Major Canadian and American Cities

Kingston is within a short three-hour drive of major metropolitan centres — Toronto, Ottawa, and Montreal. The Norman Rogers Airport in Kingston also has daily flight connections to get you anywhere in the world.

QUEEN'S LAW COMMUNITY

Queen's Law is a vibrant and collegial community, with a longstanding commitment to an inclusive and accessible legal education. We believe that the legal profession must always strive to reflect the diversity of the Canadian society it serves.

As well as having dedicated scholars, our law school is involved in community service and outreach, charitable fundraising, student clubs activities and student government. Macdonald Hall buzzes with activity from dawn to dusk - and often beyond - with clubs, special events, sports, and cultural activities.
