Events

Justice McLeod's class on Critical Race Theory

Monday, February 25, 2019 - 2:30 – 5:30, Room 300, Macdonald Hall

Queen's Law Journal "Author's Perspective Talk"

Monday, February 25, 2019 - 1:30 pm in Room 211

The Queen's Law Journal will be hosting an Author's Perspective Talk with Professor Jacob Weinrib today. Professor Weinrib will be discussing the academic publication process from the author's perspective. This talk will be of particular interest to those interested in scholarly research and writing. All are welcome. A light lunch will be provided

Ardi Imseis - Beyond Surveillance: Settler Colonialism and the Fragmentation and Control of Occupied Palestine

Wednesday, February 27, 2019 - 12:30 – 2 pm, Mackintosh Corry Hall D411

This lecture discusses some of the multifarious means by which Israel's "temporary" 51-year occupation of the OPT has been maintained. It demonstrates that far from mere surveillance, Israel's actions in the OPT are driven by ongoing settler colonialism, fragmentation and control.

Queen's Commerce Law Association

Wednesday, February 27, 2019 - 5:30, Room 201

QCLA is the first Commerce Society ratified association dedicated to educating students about law. QCLA works to foster interest in law and facilitate student connections with the Canadian legal community. On February 27, QCLA will be holding their annual LSAT Bootcamp. The LSAT Bootcamp is dedicated to providing students with in-depth insight on the law school application process and the LSAT specifically. This year, we will be having a faculty member from the Queen's Law School speak about the admissions process. Additionally, there will be several Queen's Law students who will be there to speak about their experiences and answer any questions people may have.

Liberty Lecture: Amy Wax

Wednesday, March 6, 2019 - 5:30 pm in Room 202

The Liberty Lecture series explores the law and politics of individual liberty, including freedom of speech and inquiry; the role of autonomy in liberal democracy and Western culture; and the forces that threaten liberty from without and within.

Professor Wax is Robert Mundheim Professor of Law at Penn Law. Her work addresses issues in social welfare law and policy, including the relationship between the family, the workplace, and labor markets, group demographics, and the law and neuroscience of deprivation. Her lecture will focus on the destructive effects of the quest for equal results, whose first casualty is truth.

FLSQ IWD Conference -- call for papers

March 8 and 9, 2019 - Sutherland Hall

The Feminist Legal Studies Queen's annual International Women's Day Conference, which will be held next door in Sutherland Hall on March 8 and 9th.

We are including you in the call for papers because every one of the FLSQ IWD conferences has featured members of the law school faculty and student body, including JD students.

This year, the IWD conference will feature the Keynote Lecture by the renowned Professor Angela Harris, from the University of California Davis School of Law, who is visiting Queen's University in March as the 2018-2019 Principal's Development Fund Visiting Scholar. For details of her work and record, see <https://poverty.ucdavis.edu/profile/angela-p-harris>.

Professor Harris will open the conference on March 8 at 1 pm with her keynote lecture 'The Color of Farming: Food and the Reproduction of Race.'
